January Intersession rated a success by administration and most students

by Dawn Schauer

RWC's January Intersession program was marked by a larger student enrollment than previous years, satisfying the three administrators who originated the new concept.

"Intersession was better than ever, despite all the hoopla and moaning," said one of the planners, Assistant to the Academic Dean Bart Schiavo. "We had as many students or a few more than any other year with 350 registrations." Schiavo believes the principles of Intersession are sound. "Off-campus programs can be appealing if the price is kept in relation to the cost of a course, room, and board at RWC."

He will be starting now planning three to five off-campus activities for next January. "I need 20-25 students in each program in order to make them possible. RWC will still serve those who need to make up a course, but only 10-15 classes will be offered, no more."

"Considering the decline of students enrolled in past Intersessions, this upward trend is interesting," said a member of the planning committee, Dean of Students Karen Haskell.

Even with more students than ever registered for Intersession, Bristol Motor Lodge would have housed everyone, Haskell said. "The President decided to keep Almeida open also because it would be convenient for students," she said.

Students living at the Almeida apartments without paying the $150 housing fee concerned Haskell the most. One student would pay the $150 fee, then the student would be joined by another who had not paid. "It's an issue of fairness," she said. "I don't believe in getting something for nothing while others are paying."

Haskell plans to develop a fair housing system next year so that students can "get their money's worth."

With a small number of people participating in Intersession, Haskell was concerned about the isolation of students. "It was a nice communal feeling when everyone gathered in the Rat during lunch hours," she said.

The redecoration of the snack bar was a "shining example" of what can be accomplished over Intersession, said Dean of Student Services William O'Connell, another member of the planning committee. "Next January we plan to redo the dining hall."

Maintenance-related improvements were more easily accomplished with students absent.

"Students will find the dorms a lot cleaner when they get back," O'Connell said.

He described Intersession as a "compromise". "Certain goals take more time to accomplish than others. It's much easier to ask people to empty the dorms; development of programs takes time. I view this Intersession as a first step."

O'Connell is in favor of developing more tours and exchange programs. "It's exciting for students and makes sense. By closing the dorms we saved money on heat," he said.

A Proud Symbol

The American flag waves over RWC after more than a year at half-mast. RWC followed the lead of many campuses in the nation by lowering the flag as a sign of respect for the captive Americans in Iran. The flag was raised to its full height after the release of the hostages.

RWC's new sculpture vandalized

By Joanne Tiberio

On returning to RWC for spring semester some of you may have noticed something was missing. Or maybe not.

"Going My Way" the vibrant yellow sculpture which was donated to the college had finally been mounted on the lawn adjacent to the guard shack Dec 18, 1980, when two weeks later, when RWC wasn't in session, the piece was cut down by vandals.

According to William Nott, Director of the Physical Plant, the sculpture was vandalized at approximately 3 am two weeks after it was erected, through no fault of the security guard.

"He heard a loud noise and looked up and saw the sculpture moving, he thought someone had thrown a rock at it. He no sooner had one foot on the ground and they were gone," Nott said. vandals are thought to have sneaked on campus carrying cable cutters, damaged one of the four supporting cables and ran to an idling car on the Ferry Road.

"There was no way the guard could have caught him," insisted Nott.

The sculpture, created by artist Paul von Ringelheim, had been scheduled to be set up in September but plans were delayed because the professional fabricator necessary to set it up was unable to come to RWC before December. Until the fabricator is able to return and set up the sculpture more securely, the piece has been put in storage.

"It's very unfortunate we can't have something on our campus no matter who does or doesn't like it," exclaims Nott. "But nobody know who did it."

New atmosphere created at snack bar

by Betsey Francis

For most students and faculty returning from a six week vacation, the initial shock of the newly decorated snack bar has subsided.

Along with the pleasant surprise, many questions came up.

William O'Connell, Director of Student services at RWC, supplied many of the answers to those questions.

O'Connell stated "When I began my job as Director of Student Services in August I had an idea of what I wanted accomplished." "I did the Rat first because I didn't like how it was, and I knew the students wanted it done," he said. I wanted a totally different atmosphere for the Rat and an English Pub was just the atmosphere the Rat needed. "O'Connell said. "An English Pub was quiet and relaxing."

The second item on the agenda for O'Connell was the snack bar. This time, however, he wanted a totally different approach and with the help of Russ Brown (Architect at RWC), a garden motif was the RWC's snack bar area has been converted into a garden, complete with trellises, live plants, and picket fences. The only thorn; how do RWC students fit into this perfect picture?

Financial Aid Director resigns, Babcock says 'I was not treated like a professional'

by Darlene Meyers

William Babcock, Director of Financial Aid at RWC, has resigned after less than one year in that position, and there is disagreement concerning why he left.

Robert Nemec, Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid, and Babcock's immediate supervisor, cites several reasons for the resignation. "He took a new job which is paying him better than we were paying him," Nemec said. Babcock now works in the financial aid office of the Modern Secretarial School in Providence. "Also, He wanted to capitalize on and utilize his degrees," Nemec stated, referring to the two master degrees Babcock holds.

A third reason was Babcock's long commuting distance from his home to RWC, according to Nemec. "He was commuting from Kingston which is better than one hour each way," he said.

However, Babcock refutes these reasons. "Commuting had nothing to do with it. Also, I had no quarrel with the students or faculty, or most of the administration. That was never the issue," he said. He claims better pay was not a factor in his decision to resign either.

The main reason Babcock gives for resigning was his poor working relationship with Nemec. "He and I didn't get along. He liked things done his way. I do things the way I feel they should be done," Babcock said. Nemec denies this situation existed.

A sentence in Babcock's letter of resignation reads, "I don't feel I can work in an atmosphere that is both unproductive and unprofessional." This statement makes reference to the atmosphere caused by his relationship with Nemec. "Nemec said 'never offer suggestions or recommendations unless I ask for them'," Babcock said. "If I were to continue to work without cooperation or support, it would hurt the students in the long run."

A combination of problems had escalated during the period Babcock was Director of Financial Aid. Babcock complained about his unprofessional treatment while at RWC, "I wasn't happy. The college was not using the expertise I was hired for. I didn't feel I was treated like a professional," he said.

Early last year, Babcock told Nemec he needed more staff. "This went on for nine months. Before I came to RWC, part of the National Direct Student Loan Program was handled by the Bursar's Office. When I came in, this part was handed over to the financial aid office," Babcock said. This program, which includes collection of outstanding loans, consumes a great deal of time to implement.

Then last February, during a program review of the financial aid office, federal auditors recommended that more staff be hired. No new staff was hired at that time.

Late in the year Nemec advertised for what he termed a "financial aid officer" who would report directly to him. However, Babcock felt the position should be advertised as an assistant director of financial aid who would report directly to Babcock. This act further fueled Babcock's contention that he was not being treated like a professional.

"If I were to continue to work without cooperation or support, it would hurt the students in the long run," Babcock said.

Babcock's dissatisfaction does not end with Nemec. "I felt the college didn't live up to certain commitments. As it turned out, I couldn't get one day of vacation until I was there 17 months the way the college personnel manual is written. Vacation time is pro-rated if you are there less than a year," he said.

At one point during his employment Babcock made a request to take a tax course at RWC related to work he was doing and was refused. "The class met from 9:30 am to 10:15 twice a week. Nemec said there was a problem with time, and it just couldn't be done. I told him that I normally put in extra time anyway," Babcock said.

Babcock discussed these problems with Vice-President Robert McKenna and Academic Dean James Aldrich on several occasions, but nothing came of it.

A new financial aid officer, Philip Rainville, began work on January 30. He has had six years of experience in financial aid work at several New England colleges. His main objective will be to take over the financial aid office with the intent to clear up the National Direct Student Loan Program problems, according to Nemec. "Rainville has had an excellent record in the area," Nemec reports. The NDSL Program involves federal funds and is administered by RWC. RWC has the responsibility also of collecting outstanding loans, which involves a great deal of work.

"The federal auditors want proof that we have reduced the NDSL deficit by 25 percent this year," Nemec said. Administering the NDSL Program involves 26 steps required by federal regulations beginning with an entrance interview all the way to turning over the account to attorneys for litigation, said Nemec. The total amount of financial aid awarded to RWC students during this academic year, including the seven forms of aid available, comes to approximately $4 million.

Work-study students concerned about arrangements they may have made with Babcock should not be too concerned, Nemec said. "There would be a record of commitments he made. We will honor those commitments. If there is no record, we are not going to," Nemec said.

Symposium organized to discuss male and female role

By Dawn Schauer

"Ties That Bind, Exploring Male and Female Roles" is the title of a week-long symposium to be held in the Student Center, Feb 23-27.

Events, including films, workshops, guest speakers, and panel discussions, begin at noon daily. Events are free and open to the public as well as RWC students. Refreshments will be served at each evening event.

The symposium has taken four months to organize and involves twenty RWC faculty members, many whom will be leading workshops and discussions.

"The RWC group Network generated the ideas for the symposium based on the same issues they discuss, but the event is also concentrating on male roles," said organizer of the symposium, Helene Lieb of RWC's counseling Office. "The purpose of the symposium is to delve into sex roles, their origins, and career ramifications."

Lieb stresses that the planned events are not lectures and they do not advocate a feminist viewpoint. "Instead, we will be exploring and questioning how these roles originate and how they hinder or support personal growth of the individual," she said.

Each day will be devoted to a different topic. Monday's event concerns the stereotyped roles of men and women. Are women domestic by nature or is it a product of their environment? will be one of the issues discussed.

The keynote speaker for the event is Dr Joan Bean. Her discussion will focus on the growth-inhibiting factors of traditional male and female roles. Dr Bean is currently on leave from her position as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the Brooklyn Center of Long Island University.

Non-traditional careers will be discussed on Tuesday. "By limiting career opportunities available to them, women are doing themselves an injustice, Lieb said.

Tuesday evening the play "Paperweight" will be presented. The play is described as "feminine, not feminist". It examines the lives of five working women in an insurance company. The comedy, similar in theme to the movie "9-5" was written and is performed by the RI Feminist Theatre.

Wednesday, Feb 25, has been set aside for men. "I want men to really realize that we are reaching out to them," Lieb said.

Parenthood is discussed on Thursday and on Friday the symposium ends with a look at the future trends in male/female roles.

The RI Feminist Theatre will present a performance of "Paperweight" Tuesday Evening, Feb 24, as part of a week-long symposium examining male and female roles in society.

Maintenance and clerical unions lodge grievances over punching time clocks

By Dawn Schauer

The maintenance workers and clerical workers unions have filed grievances with the RWC administration over recently installed time clocks.

All hourly employees are required to punch the time clock at the beginning and end of the day and before and after lunch.

Both unions believe the time clocks are a violation of past procedures that the union and administration had agreed upon.

"The college is getting so large that we need a more efficient method," Vice-President Robert

McKenna said. "Employees have always had to fill out time sheets."

Time clocks create more problems than they solve said maintenance workers. "Classroom workers have to walk over to the Library to punch in, secretaries have to walk to the Personnel Office, and residence hall workers have to walk to the Library," said Ed Jernigan, a steward of the maintenance union.

"There are problems of problems of accessibility, said Donna Bellemore of the Association of Clerical and Technical workers. "Secretaries have to walk to the Personnel Office, punch out, go back to their desk if they want to eat lunch there, then walk back to the Personnel Office. People say I spend more time walking back and forth than I do at my desk," she said.

"In addition, there is the psychological aspect to consider," Bellemore said. "Time clocks create a lot of psychological pressure."

"There are two clocks in the Administration Building which employees there punch, library and dorm employees punch at the library, and there are two time clocks in the Student Center," McKenna said.

"People don't like change," McKenna said, "but with the cost of labor going up we need better control over our employees. I think the time clocks are fairly effective," McKenna said.

Jernigan believes the time clocks are a form of retaliation. "It's a punishment for organizing our union. The administration is trying to prove that we had it better before the union," he said.

"If we have to, the stewards will take it to an arbitrator and let him make the decision," Jernigan said.

The Unions are waiting to hear from President Rizzini in accord with step two of the grievance process, Bellemore said.

Student Senate holds closed meeting to 'benefit students'

The Senate held a closed meeting Tuesday, Feb 3, after regular business had been completed.

The student senators voted unanimously to hold a closed meeting, although they were not sure they had to vote in order to hold such a meeting.

"The Senate hasn't held a closed meeting in a long time and we couldn't locate the rules on proper procedure, so we voted just to be on the safe side," said President of the Student Senate Ray Tedesco.

The senators approved a closed meeting without knowing the topic to be discussed, Tedesco said. "I was glad I closed the meeting, after I found out what it was about," he said.

Senator Ray Perry requested that the meeting be closed. "It will benefit the students in the long run," Perry said. "Nothing is definitely decided yet, which is why we closed the meeting."

Tuesday, Feb 15, at a Senate meeting the Senate said no more closed meetings would be necessary, although they did not mention what had been discussed at the previous closed meeting.

Barbara Love appointed Director of Residential Life as shifts occur in housing administration

The Office of Residential Life has been a busy place this year with many administrative changes occurring.

Peter Sherman, Director of Residential Life, left after the fall semester. Assistant Director Barbara Love took his place, but she is leaving at the end of this semester. A new director, Steve Mason, has been hired to begin in June.

Sherman came to RWC 2½ years ago after receiving his master's degree in Pennsylvania. He was first Assistant Director and then Director of Residential Life. "I left because I wanted to move on to something else," Sherman said, "There was no growth potential at RWC anymore."

Barbara Love is Acting Director of Residential Life. She is leaving at the end of the semester after being at RWC for seven years, four of them as a student.

Love believes it's time for a move. "I need a change of environment. After all, I've lived here for seven years. It's not like a job you can leave and go home after a day's work," she said.

Love was an RA in her junior year and graduated as Head Resident. A year after graduation she was a night manager at Ramada Inn, a part of RWC's off-campus housing. She then became Assistant Director of Residential Life.

Love would like to try business as she majored in marketing at RWC. "I don't have a job yet, but I'm looking forward to leaving in June. I feel like a graduate again," she said.

Love has enjoyed her years at RWC. "I liked what I've been doing here and because I enjoyed it, I stayed. I've also enjoyed working with the people here."

Steve Mason will replace Love in June. He attended and was interviewed at an open meeting at RWC in January. "Those attending filled out evaluations and he was the first choice of 90 percent of the evaluations out five or six candidates," Dean of Students Karen Haskell said.

Peter Sherman

Mason visited the campus and attended various meetings during the day, including a personal interview with the Dean of Students and her staff. The open meeting was attended by student senators, students, faculty, and administrators.

Haskell was sorry that more people from all areas of the college didn't attend the open meeting. "At RWC it's not unusual that most of the community don't take the time to attend. It's out of the routine and people don't realize how important choosing new staff is," she said.

Mason is Assistant Director of Residential Life at Bridgewater College, Virginia, and has been involved in residential life there for about five years.

He was previously a guidance counselor at an elementary school and before that Assistant Dean of Student Development.

RWC drills test wells for water

RWC is planning to develop its own water system in order to decrease the college's dependence on Bristol's water supply.

Last semester's water shortage in Bristol disrupted the functioning of RWC's cafeteria and could have resulted in a temporary closing of the college. "RWC's own wells would relieve our dependence on Bristol's water company, keeping them as a backup if necessary," said Vice-President McKenna.

In the next months, test wells will be drilled on campus to determine the feasibility of an independent water system. "The wells would pay for themselves in three or four years," McKenna said.

Currently, the water supply in Bristol is low, although not at the critical levels of this September.

Letourneau resigns from student Senate; Pete Cianchette is in

By Dawn Schauer

Sophomore business major Peter Cianchette is looking forward to his first semester as a student senator. He is replacing Monica Letourneau who recently resigned from the Student Senate.

Letourneau had been a senator for the past three years and was active in social committee. Although Letourneau did not want to be quoted in the Quill, she did state that her resignation had nothing to do with the Senate; she just wanted more time for other activities.

Cianchette was chosen as senator because he received the greatest number of votes as runner-up in last spring's election.

The Student Senate position is not Cianchette's first involvement in student government. He was a dorm representative last semester, a position he is now giving up in order to function more effectively as a senator.

Senate representative to Dorm Government, Wally Ramos, praised Cianchette for his participation. "Although Peter only joined Dorm Government last month he quickly became active on many committees. I think he's going to make a very good senator," Ramos said.

Cianchette wanted to be a student senator because he "likes to be with people who care about the school. I'm interested in making the college better with the facilities we have," he said.

Cianchette has "no special interests of his own, but wants to "listen to people and hear what they want to get done. The Senate should not only be a social calendar, but should benefit the students," he said.

"I'm willing to give it my best shot," Cianchette concluded.

Bad Politics

Political prophecy-makers (those people who tell us when to expect a slump in the stock market or a shift in foreign relations whenever the president opens his mouth, even if it's only a cough) foresee a return to conservative, elite politics now that Reagan, a Republican of the old school, has been elected. This conservative trend is filtering down to the state level and even to RWC politics.

RWC's Student Senate held a closed meeting Feb 3 after regular Senate business was completed.

The Student Senate should be concerned with governing the student body; funding student activities and acting on student complaints. What could the Senate possibly have discussed that evening that they would not want students to know about?

Nothing so important as to warrant prohibiting students from the meeting. It should be noted, however, that there were very few students present to ban. The Senate cannot be totally blamed for ignoring the rights of the student body if most students have no interest in what senators are planning anyway.

The Senate has forgotten, however, that they are accountable to the students for their decisions and not only to themselves. In previous semesters, the Senate has pleaded with students to attend meetings and complained of student apathy. Is the next step to be a student government in which a small group makes all the decisions without any student input at all?

Admittedly, all students are welcomed and encouraged to attend Senate meetings, but they cannot form an opinion on something they are not informed about. By barring the campus media from the closed meeting, students are losing an alternative source of information which they need in order to form objective, fair opinions.

The phrase "closed meeting" has sinister connotations to a Watergate-sensitive generation. The Student Senate may have had nothing but the best intentions; however, closing the meeting conjures up images of deceit, secrecy, and foul play.

Ironically, if the senators had adjourned the meeting as usual, then gone in small groups to the Rat in order to talk over their particular concern, no one would have thought twice about it.

Mullin explains football error

To the Editor:

Normally, I would not bother to point out an error in the Quill, because over the past semester there have been so many it would not have been worth the effort. But, in this instance, I feel I must, because it deals directly with me.

The article I am referring to appeared in the last issue of the Quill (Dec 11) and was entitled "Players Cheated of All-American". It was about mistakes I allegedly made as Student Senate Treasurer that resulted in two members of the club football team being denied recognition as All-American. I am not really surprised that the article was inaccurate, since James Hennefeld, the reporter who wrote it, did not even bother to interview me to find out the facts.

If he had interviewed me, I would have explained to him what did happen.

At least one month before the deadline for payment, I was contacted by the football team and told that $185 needed to be sent to the National Collegiate Association so the players would be eligible for awards. I informed them that according to Senate procedure, I could not send out any Senate money unless I had a proper, itemized bill.

Finally, five days before the deadline, the team did send a bill -- or rather, a carbon copy of a form that listed several expenses with no explanation, among them the $185 for eligibility. Not only was this form buried in a stack of team bills, but no one made any effort to point out the time deadline for this one particular expense. So, once again I followed proper Senate procedure; I paid the rest of the team's expenses, and filed that one particular form until I could get a complete explanation. As Senate Treasurer, in charge of spending the students' money, I will never -- under any circumstances -- send out a check until I have confirmed it as properly authorized expense.

Unfortunately, it was not until after the deadline had passed that the team finally told me what the bill was for.

Now, the purpose of this letter is not to make myself look blameless, but simply to set the record straight. I understand that breakdowns in communication like this can happen, and I am just sorry it resulted in two team members not getting the honor they deserve.

What I do not understand is how a reporter can write a story without ever even talking to the person it is about -- and more importantly, how an editor can allow such an article to be printed.

Sincerely yours,
Brian Mullin
Student Senate Treasurer

How can Senate allow 'mistakes'?

To the Editor,

In your Dec 11, 1980 issue on the sports page, you ran an article about four football players who were cheated of All-American Football Honors because of a "forgivable mistake" by our elected representative Mr Brian Mullin.

True, people make mistakes, but I wonder if the Student Senate were cheated out of a similar honor, would they or other officials of this school be so passive and not try to quickly rectify the "slight oversight".

I wonder too, how the student body and our elected officials can allow such "mistakes" as this one to occur within their own jurisdiction and at the same time complain about the same type of bureaucratic "mishaps" handed down to us by the college about our gym, ample parking, caulked windows, security, housing, etc...

The article continues by saying that the Student Senate is also contemplating, "ironically", stopping funding of the team. Is it possibly for poor performance? I'm sure the Senate can make such a decision, especially since it always "performs" without failures and probably did so in the second year of its formation.

However, as it is their right to make the decision to stop funding the team, I suggest that it is also the right of each football player to donate his $75 student activity fee to his team and not to the Student Senate's budget, that according to the same issue already contains an extra $8,000 received from payments of additional fulltime students.

signed,
A disappointed student,
Gale Savino

What's in a name?

The Quill was the recipient of many anonymous letters and phone calls last semester. The purpose of these communications was to provide the Quill with information pertaining to the college-related stories; it was not hostile hate mail.

While the Quill appreciates and encourages contributions of information and opinions, the newspaper can do nothing with anonymous material. Without names there is no way to verify information, receive more details or ask questions to clear up some confusion.

Letters to the Editor have appeared in the Quill without signatures. Not signing their names may be a copout, however, these people came to an editor first and explained their reasons for privacy.

The Quill is just like any other newspaper in that preserving the confidentiality of a source is of primary importance. In extreme cases anonymity is necessary to preserve a job or a life. All too often, however, not signing or stating a name is an evasion of responsibility. Consequently, the message lacks the sincerity of firm conviction.

The Quill would prefer all material submitted to be signed if at all possible. After all, a name is an extension of self.

Quill

The Quill is published every two weeks during the academic year. It is distributed free to all RWC students; mail subscriptions cost $5.00 to cover postage and handling.

The Quill is located in the classroom Building, CL 126. The mailing address is:

The Quill
Roger Williams College
Bristol, RI 02809
Telephone: [401] 255-2200

The deadline for all advertising is Thursday at 5pm a week before the issue comes out. Advertising is sold at the rate of $2.70 per column inch. A 50 percent discount is allowed for all on-campus activities. Personals are free to the college community.

The Quill is not responsible for any errors in advertising and will not provide financial reimbursement. The Quill will reprint the part of the ad where a mistake was made.

The deadline for news copy and letters to the editor is Tuesday before the issue comes out.

Student leaves RWC with regret, and thanks

An Open Letter to RWC:

As I leave Roger Williams College I would like to say a few words to the students whose parents foot the bill for their education: enjoy your good fortune and study hard, don't throw your education to the winds of parties, drugs and alcohol. What many of you have is rare, an education with no money problems that are constantly adding strife to your life along with your studies.

To the students who struggle and strain to get the loans, scholarships and odd jobs to keep you going, God bless you! The fight at times may seem futile and you may want to give up but hang in there, you will have that degree one day and will have more joy in your accomplishment than others who haven't had the struggle. Your degree will be etched in gold.

As an older student with tuition remission, because of my husband's job, I was able to enjoy my higher complete a lifelong dream of an education I never would have been able to afford otherwise.

Last January 1980 the dream was shattered when my husband had a massive heart attack necessitating a long period of time in the hospital. He has never been able to return to work and now I no longer have tuition remission. Because of unforeseen delays I was unable to come up with any grants or scholarships, so now I must leave.

I wish to thank Roger Williams for the opportunity to attend classes for three semesters. When I find the funds I will be back to finish and get that degree.

I want to thank Mr Phil Schuyler, my advisor, who was my guiding light in more ways than just my studies and also Mr Geoffrey Clark my creative writing instructor who stood beside me with his constant encouragement in my struggle for education at Roger Williams, to the almighty A. Anyone who is fortunate to have these two men in their corner advising and fighting for them should feel highly honored.

Mrs Charlotte Spenser and Mr Tom Russell, many thanks for opening the world of Art and making it so fascinating to study. You are both exceptionally interesting instructors.

Mr Quinn in Real Estate thank you for being an instructor who knows that a fine touch of humor adds much to an hour and a half class.

Mrs Jespersion, who brought out the fight in me to learn more in world of literature. It was a tough class but I feel better for that fight. I never realized until it was all over that I had learned so much.

To Open Division staff, Mary D in particular, and the Library staff, many thanks. You all did outstanding jobs in helping me in my various needs.

To the Quill Staff for encouraging an infant reporter, good hard-working students who accepted this grey-haired lady as a fellow reporter. Many thanks.

Last, but not least, to all my fellow students who have been my friends, confidants, and the best encouragement anyone could have. I'll miss the smiles, waves and yells across campus, but most of all I'll miss all of you. Good Luck!

Don't worry, for like MacArthur, God willing, I shall return.

Intersession saves heat and money

Although exactly how much money was saved is not yet determined, William Nott of the Physical Plant said it is a 'substantial amount'. "Students were gone during the severest part of the winter. No one anticipated how cold the weather would be, but on the average it was six degrees below normal."

"If students had been here we would have had to use two heating units to heat the residence halls, which we've never done before," Nott said.

Oil and electrical use was cut by at least two-thirds over January in the Student Center and the residence halls. "We watched the units as they were operating and a minimum of oil was used," Nott said.

Nott recommended closing the dorms over Intersession again. "It gave us an opportunity to catch up on many things," he said.

Students also seemed satisfied with their courses and housing arrangements.

"Almeida wasn't worth $150," said junior Lisa Porkka, of her first intersession "but I loved my Current Theories class."

"I wouldn't come back during January again, it's too boring with only one class during the day," Porkka said.

Living at the Bristol Motor Lodge was a change for sophomore Chris Kouropoulos. "It was more roomy even with three people in it and I had a lot of fun," he said. "It was my first intersession and I would go again."

Kouropoulos enjoyed his silk-screening class but complained that Rwc doesn't offer any science or math courses for science majors. "The only science course offered was a basic freshman biology course and I don't know many freshmen who would take it in January," Kouropoulos said.

Remember the days of sitting on the old sofa watching soap operas? Those days are gone as yellow tables and chairs replace the sofa and a new television set has been installed above the mailboxes. Students, however, still gather there every afternoon to catch the soaps.

bright, sunshiny approach he worked towards.

With a small group of workers, everything was completed over intercession. Mason work was done by Peter Gremo of the Maintenance Staff at RWC. Carpentry work involved Eddy Borden and John Sully also of the RWC Maintenance Staff.

Although most students were not aware of the renovations taking place, two students were involved. Stacy Wall did the painting and formica job on the tables, and Bob Delsandro painted the menu on the wall.

The final touch was added by John Almeida who runs the snack bar and has a beautiful green thumb. He provided all the plants and will caretake them also.

The total bill for renovations came to $8,705.12, which was $15,000 under their budget, and included a gameroom booth, all machines and a donated television.

The biggest question of where the money came from has a simple answer: the students.

But before complaining starts, keep this in mind: the money was accumulated from past years profits from the snack bar, gameroom, and Rat and this involves most of the budget O'Connell works with.

The general consensus of the snack bar remodelling is favorable. Sophomore Cris Kovropoulos thought the green color scheme was "Shocking and stomach moving" but he agreed the plants, fans, and no smoking signs were good.

Mary Campdon, a new night student said "I like the bright atmosphere especially at night after working all day."

Val Mahoney and others working in the newly renovated snack bar are very pleased with the results.

Emergency student loan fund organized

An emergency loan fund has been set up by the Dean of Students' office with fines collected by RWC's Judiciary Board.

Immediate loans of up to $25 are available to students. Loans will be issued in check form or in cash if necessary. Borrowers have 30 days in which to pay back the loan.

The program was approved by the college's budget committee for one year on a trial basis. They are expecting a report at the end of the year. "If there is a loss of money, the fines will be put into something else that benefits the students," said Dean of Students Karen Haskell.

RWC had a similar fund in previous years, but it ended because students did not pay back their loans. "It was unfortunate that some students reneged on money owed," Haskell said "most students considered returning the money a matter of integrity."

The college approved the program because students' money was involved, not the college's. "The money was collected from students and should be used to benefit them. The problem before was that the college was losing money on the loans, now only students are involved," Haskell said.

"Fines are given to punish people for inappropriate behavior, not to make money," Haskell said.

"Inappropriate behavior is a negative contribution to the community; using the fine money for student loans will be a positive gesture."

Most students have honored fines imposed by the Judiciary Board, Haskell said. If they fail to pay before the time limit they are brought before the Judicial Board again.

Currently, there is approximately $300 in the loan fund. "We can only loan out the amount we have," Haskell said. "Therefore, it is important that students pay back the loans and keep the money in constant motion."

Pre-registration was successful, new system will be continued

Pre-registration for the spring semester was successful with 80-85 percent of RWC's student population taking advantage of the lower- ed $30 fee.

The pre-registration fee was lowered from $200 to $30 last semester in order to entice more students to pre-register, reducing the problems of overcrowded or close-out classes, said the Registrar's Office.

The $30 pre-registration system will be continued for the fall semester "with the kinks taken out", said Registrar Bart Schiavo.

Last year pre-registration was held from Dec 11 to the beginning of January when many students had

Student Loan Program increases amount students can borrow

Applications for financial aid at RWC should be submitted by Feb 15 to the financial aid office. Awards are made on a first come, first serve basis with the amount based on availability of funds, said new financial aid director Phillip Rainville.

Students have an alternative to the college's financial aid program, the Guaranteed Student Loan Program available at most banks. This program has just increased its lending limit at a maximum interest rate of nine percent, effective Jan 1, 1980.

Several legislative changes in the Guaranteed Student Loan Program have increased the lending limits on funds available to graduate and undergraduate students.

The maximum total loan available to undergraduate students who are dependents of their parents increased from $7500 to $12,500, limited to $2500 per academic year.

Undergraduates who are independent of their parents may borrow $3,000 per academic year, with a maximum total of $15,000.

Graduate students may continue to borrow $5,000 per academic year. Their maximum loan total, been increased from $15,000 to $25,000.

The interest rate for a first time borrower in the Guaranteed Student Loan Program will be nine percent, with repayment beginning six months from the date of graduation or termination of enrollment. Students with previous loans will be able to borrow at a rate of seven percent, and will be allowed a grace period of nine months from the date of graduation or termination of enrollment.

Pre-registration

already gone home for Christmas vacation. "The next pre-registration will start earlier, be spread out over two or three weeks, and be held while school is still in session," Schiavo said.

The next pre-registration will tie in more closely with advisement week. "We assume people know what to register for and they really don't," Schiavo said. "Hopefully, students will discuss their schedules with their advisors."

Pre-registration days will be staggered by seniority in order to cut down on the lines at the Registrar's Office. Seniors will go first to insure that they are able to enroll in their required courses, juniors will follow, then sophomores, and then freshmen.

Health Service News: Spring and it's time to start dieting

By Kathy Flanagan
Health Service Nurse

With Spring only weeks away some of us become motivated to shed some of the pounds we gained during the winter months. Fad diets will begin appearing in the magazines...each one describing a quicker, easier way to become thin. Don't be fooled! Its been proven time and time again that the standard 1200 calorie diet is a safe and effective way to loose 2-3 lbs a week, (translated to 8-12 lbs a month or 24-36 lbs by the time summer begins.)

Health Service offers an individual weight loss and maintenance program. If you're interested call 255-2164 or stop by the office. A member of the Health Service staff will discuss your concerns, begin your weight chart and completely instruct you as to how to follow a 1200 calorie diet. And, yes, it can be adapted to the cafeteria meal plan. Since the weight program was initiated several years ago many pounds have been shed at RWC.

If, on the other hand, you prefer to do your own thing I'll share some facts that you might find helpful.

Take less of these calories.

SUGAR In everything (read the labels, you'll be amazed).
FAT Includes eggs, whole milk, beef and pork.
REFINED CARBOHYDRATES Most breads, cakes, chips, etc.
SALT In cold cuts and other cured meats, all soft drinks and most snacks.

Take more of these calories.

FISH, LIVER, CHICKEN, SKIM MILK PRODUCTS, WHOLE GRAINS, SEEDS AND NUTS, VEGETABLES -- ALL KINDS.

Burning Up Calories

RWC depressed by Saturday's jazz band

By W A Collette

Widespread Depression certainly, although no fault of their own, failed to draw any appreciable crowd Saturday, Feb 7, for their RWC cafeteria performance.

It seems clear that the Social Committee's aim in booking a big band at RWC (an obviously rock-oriented school) was to accommodate every possible musical taste, but still the turnout was small and expectations fell far short.

Despite these shortcomings, wide spread Depression was a band that played its own type of music very well. They just failed to generate student interest.

Following the Todd Hobin Band with Widespread Depression could have been the biggest factor affecting attendance since none of the posters advertising the band specified just what type of music they were going to play.

One student was overheard to comment "There was no reason for us to believe we'd be getting something so different since Todd Hobin was such hard rock. It was a letdown.

This isn't a knock of Widespread Depression, all I'm saying is that perhaps they were a band geared for too slim a segment of our student population.

Jazz and Swing fans were, on the other hand, immensely satisfied by the music, which was reminiscent of a bygone era and sound.

Still, the band had the option of being a novelty and could have drawn a crowd on that basis, had the band been better or more accurately portrayed.

Widespread Depression played a selection of Golden Oldies to an empty dance floor at Saturday's concert.

The Todd Hobbin Band generates excitement at RWC

by WA Collette

What do you get when you combine the rockin' Bruce Springstein sound and heavy metal?

Well, on Feb 6 RWC found out, and what it discovered was The Todd Hobbin Band. Who, by the way, packed in one of the best standing room only crowds I've seen at a Friday night cafeteria function.

But why is far from a mystery, as Todd Hobbin is no newcomer to music. They have a new album release on Aries Records called "Passion and the Pain" and one earlier album.

This band kicks out at its audience with what can only be described as a driving wall of sound, but the crowd didn't seem to mind from the enthusiastic way they greeted each new song as it began.

The band's two most admirable features are its playing versatility (this extends to each member of the band, being obvious professionals) and the band's ability to write its own material, yet still retain a complete quality sound which is unfortunately, among most new bands, dying out.

Original tunes like "Passion and the Pain" (the title cut), and

"Home Again" threatened to tear the roof off the cafeteria because of the feelings of raw energy and excitement they sent through the crowd.

Todd Hobbin is a five piece band (Todd himself on lead, Doug Moncrief on guitar, Bruce Fowler on guitar, Shawn Hobin on drums, and Mike Desnoyer on bass) although the sound they produce gives an illusion that more pieces are being played at any given time.

The band's studio cut new album is on sale Friday's in the Student Union, and as a reviewer I highly recommend you to check it out.

The Todd Hobbin Band springs into life not only on stage, but in their music as well.

Ed Randolph says "In your face" as he shoots for two more points in Saturday's win against Barrington College.

Men's basketball defeated by Franklin Pierce College

By Roger Carroll

RWC's men's basketball team lost a hard fought battle to the Ravens of Franklin Pierce College, 77-64. While the margin of defeat was 13 points, it should be noted that the Ravens are a team probably about 20 points better than the Hawks.

The Ravens possess a surplus of height, speed, depth, and experience. The Hawks, on the other hand, are a team that find these qualities at a premium. Under ordinary circumstances, a match of this sort would have resulted in a blowout. This did not happen.

To make up for the difference in overall talent, the Hawks resorted to one of the oldest tactics known to sports — hustle. This archaic strategy was largely responsible for the Hawks opening up an early eight point lead.

This lead failed to last, though, as the Raven full court press and overall rebounding strength overtook the Hawks, and Franklin Pierce led at the half by ten points, 36-26.

The same type of hustle that enabled the Hawks to open up their early lead was the key to their preventing the contest from being a slaughter. Though the Ravens led by as much as 16 at one point, in the second half; the Hawks kept trying to fight back, and got as close as 10.

Ed Randolph, high scorer for the Hawks with 24 points, earned every single one of them as he battled for position with the taller F P player, including 6-foot-9 Greg Trotman, for most of the evening. Trotman was the Ravens leading scorer with 24 points. Randolph had 15 rebounds, which he also had to battle for. Sal Sciarretta had 10 points for RWC.

The fact that the Hawks were able to stay within reasonable range of a team laden with talent seems to indicate that they are just a player or two away from returning to dominance in the Mayflower Conference. Those players might already be on the team, and just need experience. Or perhaps they are now attending high school and are just waiting for Coach Raffa to recruit them.

Either way, the fact that the Hawks are a hustling, well-coached team which could mature at any time means they will bear watching in the near future. IN FACT, THE LAST FIVE GAMES ON THE SCHEDULE ARE HOME GAMES... ST. ANDREW'S GYM BARRINGTON.

Leonard Washington tips it in and draws the foul in Saturday's win against Barrington College.

RWC Hockey Hawks win against Curry College overtime game

By Jeffrey Tucker

The RWC Hockey Hawks hosted Curry College on Sunday, Feb 8 and won by a score of 6-5 in a tough game that went into overtime.

The Hockey Hawks scored their first goal eleven minutes into the first period. The goal was scored by Bobby Blanchette with an assist by Roger Andrey.

Then Curry College scored, ending the first period with a tie, 1-1.

Dave Inman, nine seconds into the first period, passed the puck to Dave Brackett. Two minutes and 30 seconds later Larry Ellis scored the first of his three goals, giving him a hat trick.

The score at this time was 3-2, in the Hawk's favor. Curry College didn't give up, however, and scored three goals in two minutes in the middle of the period. At the end of the second period Curry led, 4-3.

Third period started out slowly for the Hawks. Curry managed to score in the first three minutes of the period. The score was now 6-4, giving Curry a widening lead.

Larry Ellis of the Hawk's, however, scored his second goal at 5:21 into the third period. He was assisted in the play by Bobby Blanchette and John Gaggiano.

Ellis got his third goal 27 seconds later assisted by Bruce Iadicicco. Third period ended in a tie.

The game went into overtime and two minutes later the Hawks had another win on an overtime goal by Bobby Blanchette.

Goalie Bob Pascale stopped 43 shots on goal to help the Hawks win their eighth game of the season. Their record stands at eight wins, three losses, and one tie.

Hockey team loses two, wins one

On Thursday, Feb 7, the RWC Hockey Hawks traveled Biddeford, Maine, to play the University of New England. The game ended in a 5-5 tie. Scoring for RWC were Mike Weslake, Larry Ellis, Rory Courturier, Mike Palmer, and Bobby Blanchette.

The Hawks traveled to Henniker, NH, on Tuesday, Feb 3, where they were routed by Western New England College, 6-3. Bobby Blanchette, Danny Murphy, and Dave Keith brought in RWC's goals.

On Saturday, Feb 1, the Hawk's played on Curry College's home ice and outscored them 8-6. Scoring for the Hawks were Dave Keith (2), Alan Rotatori (2), Rory Courturier (2), Mike Palmer (1) and Bruce Green (1).

Basketball Hawks lose a close one to Eastern Nazarene College

By James Hennafeld

After the first six minutes of the game at Eastern Nazarene College it looked as though the Hawks were going to lose a Laughier. Eastern Nazarene had domination of the boards combined with the Hawks poor shooting resulting in a quick score of 20-8.

A blow-out seemed inevitable for from the beginning.

Overall, the Eastern Nazarene Crusaders were taller and more experienced players than the Hawks.

Yet the Hawks were determined to surprise ENC. Center Ed Randolph and Forward Lenny Washington caught fire from the field and became more aggressive underneath the hoop, refusing to get boxed out.

The Hawks outscored ENC 15-3 in an impressive rally. The drive ended at 23 all. From there the play remained balanced ending with a halftime score of 31 all.

The second half started out very much like the first half with ENC taking command. The Hawks defense around the hoop was almost non-existent.

Plays all revolved around getting the ball to the center who would be posted low: once this happened the lay-up would be a mere formality.

When the Hawks made the move to come back, their defense fell short of containing ENC's big men.

Instead of making a move, they simply traded baskets.

Late in the second half the Hawks wheeled off six straight points. With two minutes left in the game the score was 63-61.

A basket meant for the Hawks would tie the score. But, it was ENC's ball. They worked the ball to the center who drew a foul on a successful lay up, making the score 66-61, crushing hopes of a Hawk victory.

When the smoke cleared the score was 70-65. Not a depressing finish. The game was exciting and highly competitive. Center Ed Randolph scored 23 points.

Coach Mike Raffa explained his team loss after the game. "The team didn't have enough strength down the stretch of such a close road game," he said.

"This is my first season and the team is predominately freshman," Raffa said.

Think about this; the Hawks are younger, smaller and have less experience than ENC, yet they almost stole the show.

If the Hawks win three out of the next five home games they will have won 12 games, which is twice the games they won last year. Good Show!
